Description:

The Providence United Methodist Church is situated east of Allentown Road. It is a one story gable roofed frame structure, roofed with diamond shaped asphalt shingle and sided with wood-grained white asbestos shingle, resting on a cement foundation. It is rectangular in plan with a number of additions to the east (rear) facade. It has a boxed cornice with cornice returns and wide overhanging eaves. The entrance facade is in the west gable end. Centered on the facade is a two two-story bell-tower with the church entrance on the first story. The entrance has double doors and a round arch fanlight. The door and fanlight have a wide, plain wood surround. Flanking the door are two large 9/9 sash windows, with round- arch heads, radial muntins, and plain wood surrounds. The tower has a round louvred opening centered between the first and second story and an open bell- cote with double, round-arch openings at the second story level. The tower is surmounted by a boxed cornice with crown molding and a pyramidal roof with a cross at its apex. A cornerstone on the southwest corner reads "Providence M.E. Church". The north and south facades are three bays, marked by three windows identical to those on the entrance facade. The east (rear) gable end has had a number of additions to it. The additions approximately double the length of the church building. All are one story, painted white. The sanctuary is lit by the large windows, which have some stained glass lights. The interior window and door surrounds are banded, with bull's eye corner blocks. There is a pressed tin coved ceiling. There are graves in a tree shaded area southwest of the church building. Grave dates range from 1905 to 1979. North of the church, across the parking lot, is a large modern brick church.

Significance:

The Providence Methodist-Episcopal Church was built on one and one half acres of land deeded to church Trustees by Matilda Sansbury in 1870. The church appears on the 1878 Hopkins Atlas, located on Old Fort Road. The 1871 Handbook of the Baltimore Methodist Episcopal South Conference lists a Providence Church on the County circuit. Around 1900 the congregation decided to move the church closer to Friendly, Maryland, near Allentown and Old Fort Roads. One and one quarter acres of land was deeded to church Trustees by Mary E. Sorrels in June 1901. The present church building was completed by December 1903. The first addition was constructed in 1940. The property on which the earlier church stood was sold at this time and the cemetery enclosed with a fence. The cemetery is now overgrown. The one remaining gravestone is that of James E. Sansbury, dated 1871.

Prepare both a summary paragraph and a general description of the resource and its various elements as it exists today.

The Providence United Methodist Church is situated directly east of Allentown Road. It is a one-story gable-roofed frame structure, roofed with diamond shaped asphalt shingle and sided with wood-grained white asbestos shingle, resting on a cement foundation. Originally rectangular in plan, it has had a number of additions to the east (rear) facade. The building has a boxed cornice with cornice returns in the east and west gable ends. There are wide overhanging eaves on the north and south facades.

Entrance is into a two-story projecting bell tower, centered in the west gable end. The entrance has double doors of 2 panels each, with small cross-shaped windows centered in the upper panels and a round arch fanlight above the door. The door and fanlight have a wide, plain wood surround. Flanking the door, on the main block are two large 9/9 sash windows, having round-arch heads with radial muntins, and plain wood sills and surrounds. The bell-tower has a round louvred opening centered between the first and second story levels. The second story level of the tower has an open bell-cote with double, round-arch openings facing south, west and north. The tower is surmounted by a boxed cornice with crown molding and a pyramidal roof with a cross at its apex. A cornerstone on the south corner of the west facade reads "Providence M.E. Church". There is a date, but it is illegible due to weathering.

The south facade is three bays, marked by three windows identical to those on the entrance facade. There is a corbelled brick exterior stove chimney between the first and second bays, partially covered by a shed roof, one story one bay cement block addition with an entrance door. The north facade of the building is identical to the south facade except that there is no chimney.

The east (rear) gable end has had a number of additions to it. The first is a frame, gable-roofed three-bay addition on a cement foundation. The second is rectangular, set perpendicular to the main block and is gable roofed, of cement block. The last is gable roofed, 2x2 bays, also of cement block. The additions approximately double the length of the church building. All are one story, painted white.

Prepare both a summary paragraph of significance and a general statement of history and support.

The first Providence Methodist-Episcopal Church was built on one and one half acres of land deeded to church Trustees by Matilda Sansbury in 1870.¹ The church appears on the 1878 Hopkins Atlas, located in the Oxon Hill District, on the road from Fort Washington, just northeast of its intersection with the road from Piscataway to Broad Creek. The 1871 Handbook of the Baltimore Methodist Episcopal South Conference lists a Providence Church on the Prince George's County circuit.²

Around 1900 the congregation decided to move the church closer to the settlement of Friendly, Maryland, located at the intersection of Allentown and Old Fort Road.³ One and one quarter acres of land was deeded to church Trustees by Mary E. Sorrels in June 1901.⁴ The present church building was completed by December 1903.

The first addition to the church building, for a Sunday School room, was constructed in 1940. The property on which the earlier church stood was sold at this time and the cemetery at that location enclosed with a fence. The cemetery, located across the road from 12008 Old Fort Road, is now overgrown. The one remaining gravestone is that of James E. Sansbury, dated 1871.⁵

DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

This is an attractive, frame country church that faces west on Old Fort Road. The entrance is in the base of a slightly-projecting, two-story bell-tower-located on the west gable facade. The door and two flanking windows feature overhead fan-lights. This pattern is repeated in the three, deep side-bays-which consist of 9/9 windows. A steep hip-roof caps the belfry. A cemetery is located in the church yard.

Present siding is asbestos shingle.
